"In today's environment, it is not only training and evaluating performance that are crucial, but monitoring the health and wellbeing of our telecommunicators."

*Article from Nov/Dec PSC magazine

"Health and Wellness for the Holidays"*

The holidays are upon us and what a joyous season. Reflecting on times of childhood: long breaks from school, trips to grandma's and Christmas morning that just could not come soon enough to find that one special gift under the tree. But the dynamics of the current-day holiday season have taken a dramatic turn. Everything is fast-paced: juggling schedules to attend many family functions, painstaking decisions of what gifts to buy as most have gotten what they want throughout the year, heading out to pick up those last-minute needs only to find the stores sold out. Bah humbug!

As we are also all too familiar in the world of public safety, this time of year tends to bring heightened emotions and stress, along with financial worries. These issues contribute to the increased call volume reporting criminal activity and/or illness. Sadly, too, this dilemma not only affects the community we serve, but our public safety personnel as well. As has been identified over the years for field responders, the stress and emotional rollercoaster, both personal and professional, contribute to high blood pressure, poor health, depression, even suicide. Unfortunately, these same trends are becoming more apparent for those not seen but heard. Our telecommunicators are the first to initiate calm and control; handling these situations creates unavoidable stress due to the emotional, negative and/or distraught calls received. Also, with the work environment and the requirement of remaining within the confines of the console for extended periods, bad habits tend to form including negativity, unhealthy eating and limited-to-no exercise — eventually leading to burnout.

These thoughts bring me to the topic for this article: health and wellness for the holidays! Identifying the onset of poor physical and mental health is becoming more important for the future of our employees and adds to the responsibility of managing a productive staff. In today's environment, it is not only training and evaluating performance that are crucial, but monitoring the health and well-being of our telecommunicators. Developing a healthy workplace to offset the negatives and remaining steadfast in encouraging and supporting our telecommunicators is of the greatest importance. In our communications center, we have a support coach available. This position is filled by a professional clergy/practical counselor familiar with emergency services who works alongside several emergency agencies in the parish. He makes regular visits during shifts, allowing for positive conversation and, at times, helping with closure to critical incidents. He remains available to each staff member 24/7 if needed.

APCO also strives to not only develop and provide training in these areas but to give positive recognition to our first response telecommunicators. These sources of recognition are evident in several programs: annual PSAP awards, initiatives for reclassification, ProCHRT Teammates in Action and Management Committee Compassionate Care, to name a few.

So as the holidays are upon us, and as we move into the new year, let us take this time to reflect on the positives we can bring to the team. Things as simple as acknowledgement of a job well done, a candy cane to say thank you for all you do or a little smile to show you are pleased with performance. I leave you with this. Let us remember the reason for the season and how blessed we are to protect, for this is a job of the heart and may no one be apart.

APCO Historical Committee

In most of our casual conversations, a reoccurring phrase can be heard, "remember when....". Generally, this phrase is followed by a story, a recollection of an event, or a time and place of significance at the moment. Often when an object brings back a memory there can be a remembrance of "the good old days" which we remember fondly but do not want to live through again. Our society likes to remember and this can be affirmed by the numerous museums we have throughout the country. Just visit Washington D.C. and you can easily fill a week with a variety of museum visits. Museums of American history filled with physical objects and printed articles marking places in time and events to remember.

The APCO Historical Committee invites you to join them in celebrating history. The APCO Virtual Museum is accepting submissions. This is exciting for all APCO membership. Each chapter within the APCO organization should have a Chapter Historian. The Chapter historian is tasked with keeping record of the organizational meetings, the charter issued by the organization, records of conferences hosted and memorabilia of special occasions including photographs of the event. What to do with it all can be the big question.

The solution to this question is part of the exciting news of the ability to now submit items to the Virtual Museum. Soon you will see more information forthcoming regarding how to submit to the Virtual Museum and how to search within the Virtual Museum. The submission form will be refreshed and pushed out for all to use.

APCO is committed to preserving history, through the Virtual Museum and by supporting the APCO Archive located at Bradley. With this commitment we can reflect on past developments and events, consider how they have shaped the future, and look forward to the continuation of documentation of important information for the APCO organization. What can we add from your chapter to enhance our collection for all to enjoy?

As an organization formed nearly 80 years ago, APCO International has a rich history. Since that time, the organization and the field of public safety communications have undergone myriad changes. The people, the technology, the memorabilia all weave together to tell the story of how APCO has grown to be the largest public safety communications membership organization, and how the industry's capabilities have grown exponentially to keep pace with the needs of the public it serves.

ECC Crisis Response

Public safety telecommunicators, supervisors, and managers work every day in emergency communications centers. They are prepared to respond to critical situations which occur in the communities they serve. Policy and procedure, emergency operation plans, technical response plans, and other preparatory resources focus on how to respond and mitigate emergencies when they occur. However, when emergencies are large scale or prolonged they can have a significant impact on center operations and the telecommunicators.

Most of the available training and preparatory resources within a center focus on how staff will respond to the needs of the community. There is often very little focus given to supporting the ongoing needs of staff members. In July 2019, the APCO Emergency Communications Center Crisis Response Task Force completed a report with reference guides containing best-practice recommendations for responses to impactful events. The intent is to assist public safety professionals to better prepare for the aftershocks that come from high profile events. Taking care of those who take care of the community.

To view the full report, go to:

https://www.apcointl.org/download/ecc-crisis-response-taskforce-report-crisis-preparation-manual/?wpdmdl=30648

The task force did an excellent job pulling together considerations and templates for centers to model, but we need our professional community to continue to provide lessons learned through your experience within crisis incidents. We want to build upon the outstanding work done by the task force to provide even more essential steps to care for our communities, our field responders, and ourselves should the unthinkable happen. There are many ways to share. Through your Chapter, on PSConnect Forums, or directly to ProCHRT: prochrt@apcointl.org.

APCO Conference 2020 Solo?

Attending APCO National Conference Solo?

I have been attending APCO conferences for 25 years. I look forward to seeing acquaintances and catching up. At the Baltimore conference, I was able to have dinner with long-time friend and acquaintance, Sandi Barfield, Manager of the University of Las Vegas Police Services, NV Communication Center. She mentioned that she was attending the conference alone. As we chatted during dinner, we noticed a couple other single people come in and sit down by themselves to eat. We both said, "I bet they are APCO attendees". Curiosity got the best of us, so we asked, "Are you attending the APCO conference?". They both replied yes. We explained to them that we were just talking about how it would be nice if there was a way that anyone attending the conference alone could make contact with other attendees traveling alone.

There are many communication centers that can only afford to send one person to a conference! Instead of eating dinner alone, you could get together with other solo attendees and talk about your day, what classes you attended and even better expand your network of public safety acquaintances! This would not have to be anything official. I picture perhaps posting "hey everyone I am planning on dinner at the XYZ Café at 530 Sunday night, anyone wishing to join me let me know or show up". Someone else may say "Hey a couple of us are going to ABC Dinner at 630PM if anyone wants to join us" and people can attend or not. This would not be limited to attendees traveling solo, perhaps you simply like the idea of meeting new APCO acquaintances.

Our two solo diners, (sorry gentlemen I do not remember your names) felt it was a great idea and when I left, I promised them I would do my best via my APCO Committees (Editorial and Membership & Chapter Services) to get this idea launched before Orlando 2020.

Everyone, this is your opportunity to speak up! Should we encourage APCO to perhaps set up a PSConnect site just for the Solo APCO Attendees? Or maybe when you register for the conference you could check a box that states, "I am traveling solo and would like to connect with other solo APCO attendees".

Finally, put your thinking cap on, what should we call this group? If you are interested, please drop me a quick email and I will start gathering the data. Hopefully, next year in Orlando I will be able to sit down with you all and say hi, how was your day! I know Sandi will be sitting there next to me!

From the Member and Chapter Services Committee

Dear APCO Officers and Members,

The Member and Chapter Services Committee (MCSC) supports the membership at the chapter level by building relationships with chapter leaders. Each MCSC member is assigned to represent Chapters and throughout the year they maintain information flow with the chapter leaders. We are here to keep APCO members informed of association policies, governance guidelines, and other APCO programs. Just as important, we push issues from the local level to the APCO leadership level. We work for the people and strive to make sure you receive all that you can from your APCO membership.

MCSC members work diligently to get program questions or information out to the local chapters, gather the needed feedback, and get answers back to the APCO organization. We share information about programs, training, and initiatives supported by APCO International as well as upcoming events through the monthly MCSC e-Newsletter.

MCSC works to build relationships among chapter leaders through training classes and webinars hosted during the year. We also assist the APCO organization staff to provide chapter leader training and workshops at the annual conference. But, we need your help to make these things happen. You can assist us by:

- Keeping your Chapter officer list up-to-date with APCO headquarters.
- Submitting information about upcoming events or programs in your Chapter for the e-Newsletter.
- Keeping the contact information of your MCSC representative handy so if you have questions or need anything you can call on us to help.
- Participating in chapter officer calls, webinars, and training so that you are up-to-date with the current information.
- Letting your MCSC representative know who to contact in order to get information about your chapter if the President of your Chapter is not the primary contact person..
- Looking for the monthly e-Newsletter and providing us with feedback through your chapter.

We are very fortunate to have members on the MCSC who support APCO and are willing to volunteer their time to make sure that APCO can meet its vision to strengthen our communities by empowering and educating public safety communications professionals. As a committee, we look forward to continuing to work with you!

Sincerely,

Member and Chapter Services Committee
